

Meaning

- Staffing involves "finding the right person for right job having the right qualification, doing the right job at right time."
- It is the function of management which make sure your assets walk out and come back next day happily and satisfied.

Importance of staffing. ---->

- 1) Filling the vacant job position by a competitive personnel →
→ staffing function ensures that the job position should not be vacant and it should be filled by a competitive personnel.
- 2) Placing Right person at the right job → In staffing function through proper recruitment and selection process, right person is giving right job.
- 3) Optimum utilisation of human resource → Through proper planning employees are hired in staffing function number and types of employees are considered so that there is no shortage and no excess employees.

4) Growth of Enterprise → By appointing efficient staff, staffing ensures continuous survival and growth of the enterprise.

5) Development of human resources → Staffing function does not end only with appointment of employees. It includes training, promotion, compensation, career advancement, opportunity, personality development etc. These activities motivates employees to perform with their best ability.

6) Helps in competing → Two organisation can easily acquire same type of physical and financial resources but not human resources.

They are most important assets of the organisation. They only helps the organisation to win over its competitors.

7) Key to effectiveness of other function → In staffing function we hire employees who help in performing rest of the function of management. without efficient staff no other function can started.

Human Resource Management

- HRM is the part of management process which develops and manages the human elements of the enterprise considering their knowledges, skills, creativity, talents and potentials for achieving organisational objectives.
- It involves determining the org. need of human resources, recruitment and selecting the best employee, training, developing, compensating and rewarding the employees.

STAFFING & HRM

- 1) Human resource planning → Determining the number and types of personnel required to fill vacant job position of org.
- 2) Employing people → recruitment, selection and placement of personnel.
- 3) Career growth → training and development of employees.
- 4) Performance appraisal including feedback.
- 5) Motivation → by offering financial and non-financial incentives.
- 6) Compensation → remuneration of employees keeping in mind their qualification and other factors.
- 7) Providing social security and welfare of people.
- 8) Review and audit of personnel policies and procedures.

← STAFFING PROCESS →

1. Estimating the man power requirements → Staffing process begins with estimating the number and type of employees needed by the organisation. The following steps are followed

- (i) Work load analysis → This requires finding number and types of employees required to perform various jobs.
- (ii) work force analysis → Here existing workforce are analysed and how many of them are underburdened or overburdened.
- (iii) Comparison → Manager compares both the workload and work force. If workload is more than work force, it means under staffing and more employee should be hired and if workforce is more than workload, it means over staffing then employees should remove or transfer to some where else.

2. Recruitment → It refers to the process of inducing people to apply for the job.

Company can fulfill the vacant job positions from inside the organisation and outside the org. Both has its merits and demerits.

When more numbers of people apply for the job company can select the most suitable candidate from wider choice.

3. Selection → It refers to choosing the most suitable candidate to fulfill the vacant job position.

The selection is done through a process called selection process where no. of selected candidates are less than no. of rejected candidates hence it is a negative process.

4. Placement and orientation → Placement means putting the person on the job for which he is selected. Orientation refers to introduction of new employees to the existing employees.

5. Training and development → After selection of an employee company provides training to the new employee. It improves the performance of employees and keeps them motivated.

- Following three steps are performed by those org. which don't have HRM department. -

1) Performance appraisal → It refers to evaluation of the performance of employees against some standard. Better performance of employees are recorded here.

2. Promotion and career planning → On the basis of performance appraisal report employees are promoted to a higher job position with more authority and pay.

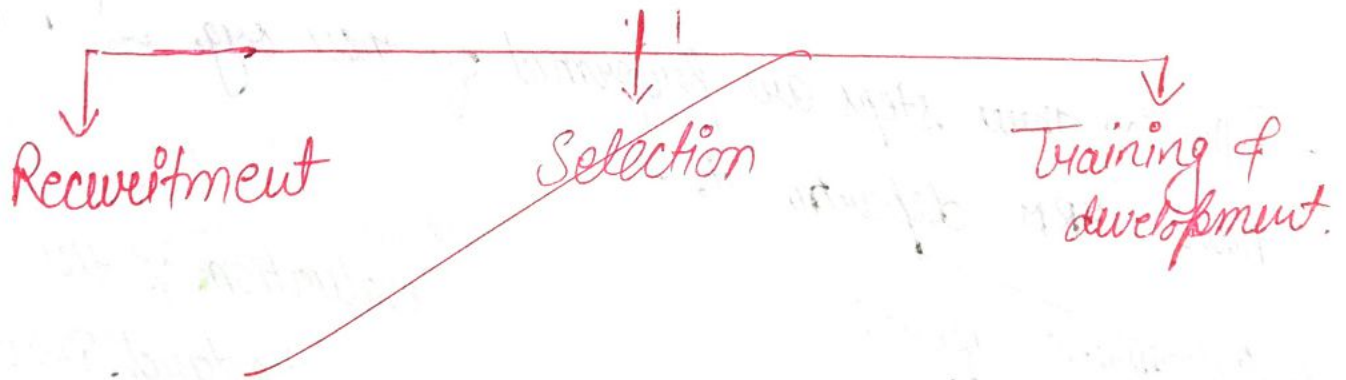

3. Compensation → It is the financial payment for the job. It includes direct payment such as wages, salary and indirect payments like medical facility, insurance etc.

• Direct financial payments are of two types. -

a) Time based → It means salary / wages are paid on time basis. eg. daily, weekly, monthly basis.

b) Performance based → It means payment is made on the basis of number of pieces or unit produced.

Components of Staffing

1 Recruitment

→ It means inducing more and more candidates to apply for vacant positions in the organisation.

÷ There are two sources of Recruitment ÷

- (i) Internal sources
- (ii) External sources.

A. Internal sources of recruitment.

- Here vacant job positions are fulfilled by existing employees. no outsiders are permitted to fulfill the vacant job positions.

- Following methods of internal source of recruitment are-

(i) Transfer → It means shifting of employees from one job position to another at the same level of authority.

~~Salary of the employee would not change. only place of working is changed.~~

Eg. Transfer of clerk from purchase department to account department.

(ii) Promotion $\Rightarrow$ It means shifting of employees from one job position to other at higher level with more authority.

Salary of that employee would increase.

E.g. $\rightarrow$ Promotion of the clerk to accountant post.

$\div$ Advantages of internal source of recruitment $\div$

- (i) The managers are aware of the talents and abilities of existing employees.
- (ii) It is less expensive as compared to external sources.
- (iii) It motivates the existing employees.
- (iv) Less amount spent on training.
- (v) Improvement of performance.
- (vi) Less chances of turnover, because existing employees are familiar with rules and regulations of company.
- (vii) Through transfer, surplus employees can be shifted to other department.

$\div$ Disadvantages of internal sources of recruitment $\div$

- (i) No fresh or new ideas will come in the org.
- (ii) There will be limited choice.
- (iii) No suitable of new org.
- (iv) Frequent transfer may reduce the productivity of employees.
- (v) Sometimes it causes conflicts among existing employees.

B. External Sources of Recruitment

- How vacant job position are fulfilled by outside the org. Company hiring people outside the org.

÷ Following are the methods of External Sources:

(i) Direct Recruitment ⇒ This method is most suitable for unskilled job positions. In this method org. paste notice at the gate of their office or factory. Interested people walk in for interview.

(ii) Causal Caller ⇒ Generally the large org. maintain an application file in which they keep all the pending applications which the job seekers leave with the reception. This application file is considered as a waiting list. Whenever there is a job vacancy the suitable candidates from the waiting list are called.

(iii) Advertising ⇒ The advertisement is the most common and preferred source of external recruiting. The ads in news paper, professional journals etc.

Eg. for the job of an accountant the adv. can be given in chartered accountant journal and other jobs are given in local newspaper.

(iv) Employment Exchanges $\Rightarrow$ The employment exchange is the office run by the govt. where in the details about the job seekers such as name, qualification, experience etc.. is stored. When the org. approach employment exchanges the suitable candidates are sent.

(v) Educational institutions for Campus placement $\Rightarrow$ Creating a close liaison with the educational instituts for the recruitment of students with technical and professional qualifications has become a common practice of external recruitment. Here companies visit the technical, management and professional colleges to recruit the students directly for the job positions. The recruitment from educational insitutions is also termed as campus recruitment.

(vi) Placement agencies and management consultants $\Rightarrow$
 $\Rightarrow$ There are several private management firm that act as middleman b/w job seekers and job providers. These firms maintain data of all the job seekers and give their details to the companies who are looking for men.
 $\Rightarrow$ They are also charge fee for providing such service.

(vii) Recommendations from present employees $\Rightarrow$ Many firms recruit employees by the help of recommendations of existing employees. This also shows the trust of an existing employee.

(viii) Labour contractors $\Rightarrow$ Labour contractors are the people who keep in touch with the labour in villages and rural areas. and whenever there is any vacancy of labour in a factory then contractor will supply labour to businessman.

(ix) Advertising on television $\Rightarrow$ Company telecast the job requirement and type of employees they require on television.

(x) web publishing $\Rightarrow$ An internet there are certain websites specifically designed provide information regarding job seekers and companies which have vacant job positions. These websites can be visited by job seekers as well as companies. These websites are: Naukri.Com, Monster.com, google for jobs etc.

÷ Advantages of External sources ÷

- (i) Fresh and new talent come to the org.
- (ii) There is wide choice of external source.
- (iii) By using external recruitment the management can get qualified and trained persons.
- (iv) Through campus placement organisation can get employees with latest technological knowledge.
- (v) When outsiders join the org. then it develops a competitive spirit among existing employees.

÷ Disadvantages of External sources ÷

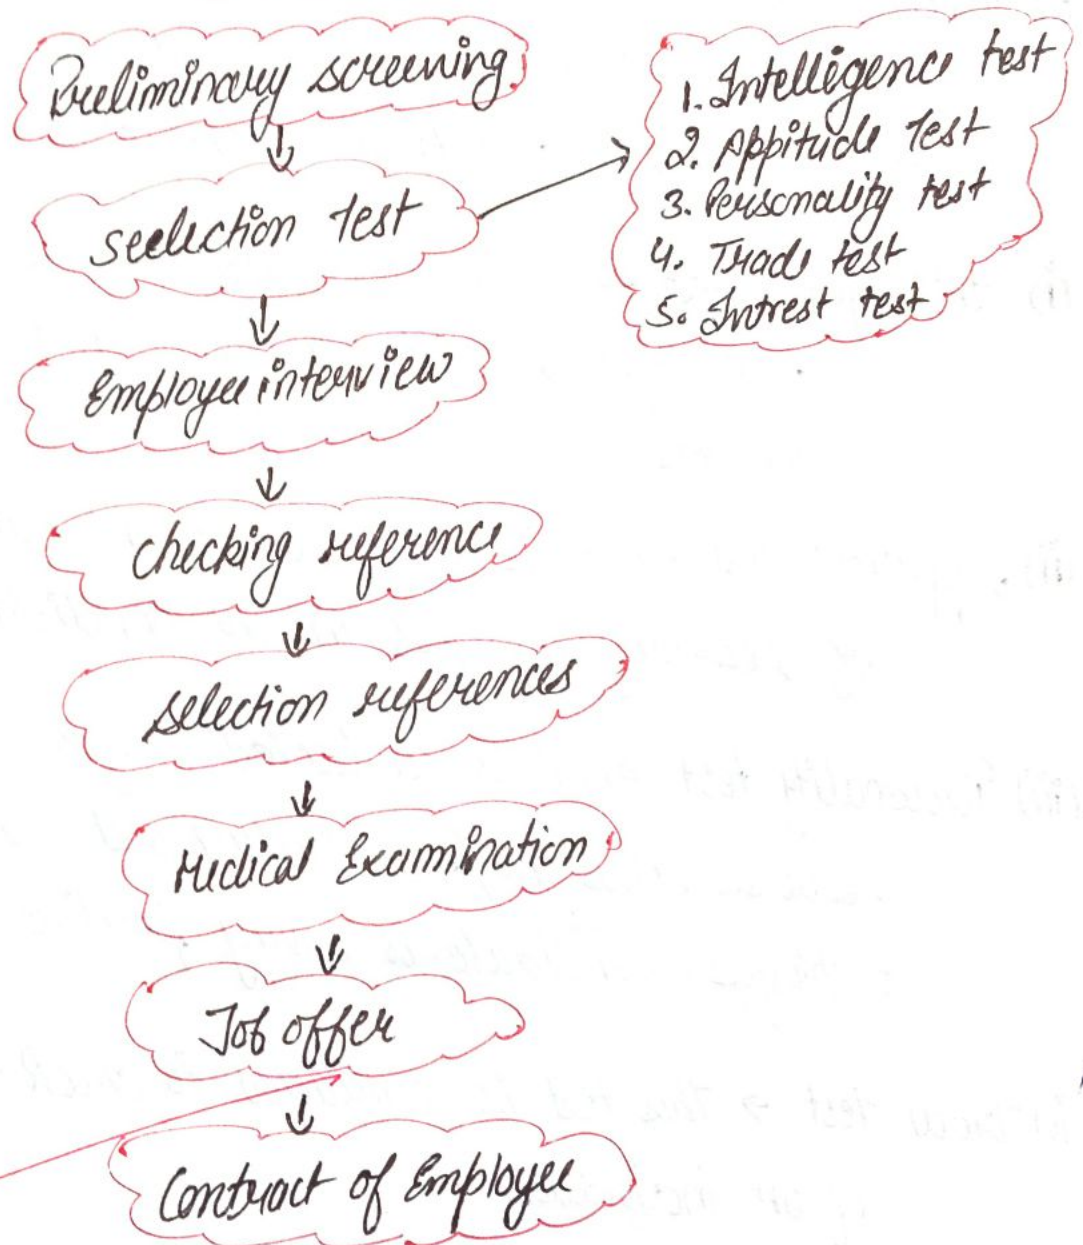

- (i) The main morale of existing employees goes down.
- (ii) It is expensive.
- (iii) The new employees may not adjust in the rules and regulations of the org. which means more turnover.
- (iv) Time consuming process.
- (v) Expense on training and orientation.

← . . SELECTION . . →

→ It means selecting the most suitable candidates for the vacant job positions.

→ The following process is followed for selecting an employee -

Selection Process

a) Preliminary screening $\Rightarrow$ It is done to eliminate the unqualified candidates. Some basic question about employees, Qualification, school & colleges, marital & status etc. are asked.

b) Selection test $\Rightarrow$ To find out the knowledge of the candidates a written test is conducted.

- Following types of tests are conducted -

(i) Intelligence Test $\Rightarrow$ It is conducted to know the I.Q level of employees, whatever he is able to take decision or not.

(ii) Appitude Test $\Rightarrow$ It is conducted to find out the potential of learning new job in the candidate.

(iii) Personality test $\Rightarrow$ It is conducted to find out the human behaviour. This helps in finding out the attitude of employees. Candidate is having positive and negative attitude.

(iv) Trade test $\Rightarrow$ This test is conducted to check the existing skills of an individual.

(v) Interest test $\Rightarrow$ This test is conducted to find out the type of job in which he interested.

c) Employment interview → Candidates who qualify the test are called for interviews. To conduct final interview a panel of experts is called. Experts of diff. field ask their questions from the candidates. Confidence level of employees is also checked. even employers can clear their doubts regarding the job.

d) Checking references and background → Candidates has to give two references. and after qualifying interview org. check the references about the personnel character of the employee.

e) Selection decision → The candidates who pass the test, interview and references check are included in selection list.

P) Medical Examination → Before giving appointment letter the candidates ~~selected~~ are sent for medical Examination. ~~some~~ org. appoint their own doctors to do the test and some sign contract with hospitals to do test.

G) Job offer → Contract who clear the medical test are given appointment letter. In the letter the date of joining, terms and conditions of job, etc. are mentioned. Generally a reasonable time is given to the candidates to join the org.

H) Contract of employment → when candidate accepts the job offer it refers to signing the contract of employment. Content of contract are the duty and responsibilities of the employee towards the job, pay, Allowances, terms of the job, leave rules, etc...

← . . . Training and development . . . →

→ Training is a process of teaching the basic skills the new and old employees so that they can effectively perform their job.

→ It is an act of increasing the knowledge and skill of an employee for doing his job.

→ Development refers to overall growth of the employee. Development is much wider in concept as compared to training. Training is the part of development. Training focus on present requirements of the org. But development focus on present as well as future requirement of the org.

→ Needs for Training and Development / Benefits ÷

- a) Reduced learning time → Training and development reduced learning time as a trained employee always takes less time in learning the job as compared to untrained employee.
- b) Attitude formation → Training helps to develop the positive attitude of employee.
- c) Better performance → The performance of trained employee is always better than the performance of untrained employees. Training and development programme improve their quality.
- d) Helps in solving operational problems → Training and development helps to remove operational problem like absenteeism, wastage of resources, lack of team work, dissatisfaction of employees, etc...

E) Reduce Labour Turnover $\rightarrow$ Training and development helps employer to stay in business for a long period.

F) Managing manpower need $\rightarrow$ - Some org. have machineries but operating staff is not available in that case org. hires untrained people and train them with required skills.

G) Helps to adapt changes $\rightarrow$ With the help of training any changes in the environment can easily adopted.

- Benefits of Training & development to employees -

- (i) It improves the skill & knowledge of employees which brings better career options for them.
- (ii) A Trained employee can also earn more.
- (iii) It increases satisfaction and morale of employees.
- (iv) Job security.
- (v) Chances of promotion.

Methods of Training

• On the job training

• off the job training.

A) On-the-Job-Training → How employees are trained while they are performing their jobs. They learn by doing.

This method is suitable only for technical jobs and the advantage the method is employees can learn the practical problems while working the job. But disadvantage is employees can waste the resources.

This method of training is avoided when org. deal with heavy & expensive machinery.

- The common and popular techniques of training under on the job method are - a) Apprenticeship Programme → In this programme, a master worker is appointed who guides the learner. Master performs the job and learner observes him performing when the learner learns all the skills then. Learner performs the job and master observes him performing. It is suitable for plumbers, electricians, iron & steel workers etc..

b) Internship → It is an agreement b/w professional institutes and the corporate sector where professional institutes send their students to various companies so that they can practice the theoretical knowledge. Here students get chance to practice under the real work situations and also get stipend [less than salary].

c) Induction or Orientation Training → It is a process of receiving and welcoming an employee when he first joins the company and giving him the basic information he needs to settle down quickly and happy starts work. It develops the ~~fast~~ feeling of belongingness in employees.

B. Off-Job-Training

→ It means training the employees by taking them away from their ~~working~~ position which means employees are given a break from the job and sent for training. This is suitable for managerial job positions.

- The common popular techniques of training under off-the-job method are -

- a) vestibule school $\Rightarrow$ It means duplicate model of org. when machineries are heavy, complex & expensive then on-the-job training method is generally avoided and a Dummy model of machinery is prepared and employees are getting training from that dummy model. When employees are trained then they can now work in original machinery.

Good

1/clsbrar
16/7/22